“ Alice Miller was a very special volunteer at the Clinton Macomb Main Library for a number of years where she made friends with fellow volunteers and patrons each time she entered the library. She had a unique, joyful spirit and whether you were a volunteer or a patron, you would always walk away from a visit with Alice with a smile on your face. She had so many interests and hobbies you would really have to pay attention to her latest adventures as she was a woman "on the go".

In addition to her love of people, family and friends, she loved animals. She kept up with the daily news however bleak it was, and somehow had a positive outlook for all she had seen throughout her many years that life is sure worth living to the fullest. She sure did this and did it well, and as one volunteer said not too long ago, "Alice is my hero", when it was apparent Alice's cancer was getting worse. Alice showed us all how to "not sweat the small things" and get on with our lives to enjoy the moments whether we are with family, friends or at times when we are alone.

She celebrated life's ups and downs and left us one big surprise: her actual age finally revealed which none of us would have guessed due to her young-at-heart spirit always ready to laugh it up! Yes, she will be missed by the birds she fed, by the people she encountered and by her family without a doubt but especially by the Clinton Macomb Library patrons and volunteers who were so privileged to have her with them as she was an amazing woman who became "our hero" because she knew how to live a good life. God did not have enough angels so he sent us you! Thank you, Alice.
