“ I'm so sorry to hear of Darlene's passing; thank you to "Dee" who called me Thursday evening. I was not functioning on all my cylinders at that point and confused her name with a local Darlene. I did not know Darlene personally; but we had talked geneology many times, via phone and e-mail. Daryl and I would have been 2nd cousins, which makes me 2nd cousin once removed to Daryl and Darlene's children. My parents, Carl and Martha Linderman visited Daryl and Darlene once in their home as a result of our geneological connection. My Dad, Emma Linderman William's nephew, remembers her well, as well as remembers Wilma. So he enjoyed visiting with them about family connections. I appreciate very much that you contacted me, Dee, and am sorry I did not realize who it was you were calling about! My thoughts have gone your way often since I made the connection, and I checked caller ID but you must have your phone blocked, so I had no way to contact you in return. My deepest sympathy to all of the family. I'm sorry we had lost contact and I had not spoken or heard from Darlene in quite a while. I will miss have missed connecting with her.

“Darlene was a kind, caring, considerate person and I was sad to learn of her passing. Darlene’s passing brings to mind this writing by Henry Van Dyke ôI am standing upon the seashore. A ship, at my side, spreads her white sails to the moving breeze and starts for the blue ocean. I stand and watch her until; at length, she hangs like a speck of white cloud just where the sea and sky come to mingle with each other. Then, someone at my side says, "She is gone" Gone where? Gone from my sight only. That is all. Her diminished size is in me -- not in her. And, just at the moment when someone says, "She is gone," there are other eyes watching her coming, and other voices ready to take up the glad shout, "Here she comes!" While we mourn the passage of Darlene, we must remember the glad shouts of ôhere she comesö her loved ones are making as she nears that distant shore out of our sight. While we experience great sadness as she passes from us, there are others who are experiencing great joy as she arrives. May you be comforted during your time of sadness and remember with joy the times you spent together with her.
