“ 'Ray' was a good friend and neighbor He was always ready to give a helping hand, advice or a friendly ear to listen. What ever the occasion, he was always there when needed. 'Ray' you will be missed from our life but not from our hearts.

“ My father was and remains my albeit imperfect hero. He was a fierce protector of those he loved. To paraphrase Mr. T; "I pity the fool" who would bring harm to someone he loved. Especially his family. He was a physically powerful man. But, beneath his oftentimes gruff exterior was a sensitive and frequently, sentimental guy. I realize that some would find this difficult to believe but he could be hurt quite easily and suffered greatly because of it. Still, he never abandoned us through 67 years of family life; one wife, six kids. My Hero.

“ Earl was all about respect. My best friends, his sons Scott and Mark, told stories all the time about their father. What better way to show respect! If you disrespected Earl you also quickly learned that lesson also. I was able help Earl with some of his many automotive projects, and he always treated me with respect. When I would see him he always called me over, with that huge smile and sparkling eyes, to say hi and to ask me what such a nice looking girl was doing with a bum like me. He was and will always be a powerful force in this universe! Happy Trails Earl!

“ I spent so many days and nights at the Bosley house, I may as well as been on of their own. Along with Lynda, Michelle, and Karen! Mr. Bosley was 7 feet tall, and had a big booming voice that scared us all silly, but we loved it just the same! He would come into the kitchen with his gray coveralls on, and ask in his big voice, "WHY ARE YOU KIDS HERE?!" "WHY ARE YOU EATING ALL MY FOOD?!" Then we would all giggle and run into the basement so that he could watch TV...usually the Lions game. And Mrs. Bosley would say in her super sweet voice, "Oh, Ray, leave those girls alone!" Oh, the memories. Mr. Bosley, I will always remember you welcoming me into your home, and I will miss you! You were a giant man with an even bigger heart! All my love, Lori xo
