“Someone that loved because I loved her daughter Someone that loved because I helped bring her a grandchild Someone that loved and didn't understand why a divorce Someone that didn't understand what was going on or why.
Someone that loved and appreciated that I was handy around her house too
and hollered at her husband for what he couldn't do.
Painting, plaster, rails, walls, doors, floors, stairs, locks, gates, bushes, yards, cars, and almost a roof.
“Gloria, that's where plaster goes, not concrete.”
Someone that loved you didn't matter if you had 2 legs, 3 legs, or 4
It didn't matter if it was the dog barking down the street, meowing at her door, or her child's pet she had food for them, let them in and they wouldn't be sleeping on the floor.
If she was going to the humane society, she'd be bringing home a new friend
She lived in abundance and always had food and stuff to bring
So much we'd complain when we should have brought some back Known for her love of movies, TV, dogs, cats, chain smoking, food, thrift shopping, family meals out, her grandson, her daughter, friends, family, and church.
One of the best baby sitters in a moment's notice
The best family member that assisted by picking up Dylan from preschool/school
Never drove a day in her life, hardly worked the other, but you'd never know it
She wasn't poor.
Her happiness, her zest for life, family, food, & church shined a light into your life.
She was a blessing for everyone she ever met and more
She was part of a family that made up for where ones lacked Didn't understand my mother or much more my aunt.
RIP Gloria, I'm sure you'll walk through heavens door.
My condolences for her family and gratitude for everything she was,
did, and more
