“ To the V family, My deepest sympathy for your loss along with loving memories of a courageous woman who lived an extraordinary life. I am grateful for the time that we were able to share—chatting in the living room wingback chairs, peeling potatoes at the kitchen table, learning the secret of cutting a poppyseed cake with a piece of string . . . I find comfort in the words of English mystic Julian of Norwich, sometimes used as a mantra in Christian meditation : “All Will Be Well, and All Will Be Well, and All Manner of Things Will Be Well.” Perhaps her words will comfort you as well.
