“ Hi grandpa (I always wanted to call you that) I also always wanted to be old, get drunk off beer and magically become mature enough to eat a huge bloody steak just like you taught me to cook on your grill. You made everything look so fun and simple. I'll never forget the time you took us to the zoo under the aquarium and shouted “ there's a leak RUN!” and everyone scattered like roaches until they realized no there wasn't 😭 and started calling you names. You stood there cracking up at yourself with your evil laugh and told everyone to pipe down. I always found it so funny how you could go from laughing to serious as heck in a split second. I wish I would've came to see you just one last time. To thank you for everything you've done for my mom, myself and sisters. You treated us like your own from day one. It's no wonder I had a son who shares the same birthday as you. The caliber of man you were and introduced us to is unmatched by virtue of my step dad, as I've watched him literally turn into you (belly and all). So thank you grandpa Lou, for everything. I will cherish all our memories. You will be missed and forever live in my heart.
