“ The passing of Margaret brings back some of the best memories of my childhood. Our families spent so much time together up north. Margaret introduced me to eating canned beets. She would make unforgettable meals and afterwards, we would all sit around listening to "jam sessions" with Dad playing the accordion and Earl on the banjo. It's hard to believe that it was so many years ago. Now at age 41, I have two sons of my own and I can only hope to create the kinds of memories for my children that my parents created for me, that of which included Margaret and Earl. God Bless You Margaret. You are one of life's gems. One day we'll be eating beets together again.
