“ Although we lived hundreds of miles apart & hadn't seen each other since we were children, there was a bond forged that even death will not break. Sharon Taylor Lucido was truly one of Heavens sweetest angels. Her smile would light up a room & it wasn't just a facial expression, she smiled from the very depth of her soul. Always gentle, loving, compassionate, quick to let you know how important you were to her.... our world is a much darker, more lonely place. Although my heart aches at the loss, I rejoice because I KNOW where our angel is & I KNOW that one day soon, we will all be home together, NEVER to be separated by time or space.... I can almost see the glow on her face when she arrived in Heaven..... the wonder was almost beyond comprehension, until she saw Jesus..... Those of our loved ones who had already gone before her, were there to greet her as well. I'm sure that she has told them all how much we love & miss them..... Sharon going home is just another reason to long even more to our time when we will all be reunited. I hope all you know how very much I love each & everyone of you, simply because you are my family..... Love & prayers..... ViKi

“ Reflecting on Sharon when we were young and worshipped together. Always quiet and to herself. Now she is truly free and able to have all the mental and physical pain removed. She is having a big family reunion dancing before the Holy One with Sister Adams I'm sure. What joy she must feel! May God comfort her family in their loss. Barbara Sitz Juan
