“ Aw man, gonna miss you Steve. You were truly one of the good guys. The talks we have shared will always be remembered. Steve and I somehow volunteered to work a temporary 2nd shift together at Charter and we became good friends. I always worried about him driving home as he told me some of his wild driving experiences. One of the things I liked most about him was he always told things straight up, no sugar coating. Always put a smile on my face..

“ I first met Steve when we worked together at Charter. He used to make me laugh all day. He was the funniest grumpiest old man I ever met. I just took to him right away. He used to tell me stories of his time in the service, and his working career. He never seemed to be short on conversation. His stories all seemed to have some sort of shock factor. With all the hours I have sat and had conversations with Steve, even at his passing, he is still shocking me with his time here on Earth. He never one time told me he sang in a band. I am really gonna miss him. He was one of a kind for sure.
