Hey Vinny it's it's Joey G, well it's been 19 years today man, I told you I'll keep writing as long as I can on the anniversary of your passing, I'm doing good just pushing forward it's Sunday morning September 1st 5:47 a.m. went to bed early last night couldn't sleep, I get up at like 4:30 in the morning for work everyday so it's hard to sleep in LOL... Just sipping on some coffee and decided to touch base and say that I miss you and how crazy that whole situation was when you passed but nothing to wild going on, still married and doing okay... Guess it looks like your mom had passed as well from what I've read? She was lonely without you man big time, you're passing was extremely rough on her, I knew it at the time but I really realize that now... I know you guys are with each other finally, please tell her I'm sorry! I should have been there for her a lot more that I was, I realize that now 😞 all right man, I will push forward with another year and I'll touch base next September 1st for your 20th wow 20 years bro... it's funny because I always think about your anniversary of passing like weeks before and I know I'm going to sit down, kind of talk with you a little bit and let you know how it's going, all right buddy until next year I love you good sir 🇺🇸

“ Vincent, I will never forgot the times you came over my gradma's house when we were young. You would always let me win any games we played together on purpose. On the first day of every school year you would always introduce your friends to me and say look after my cousin. You always treated my like a little sister. I will miss you a lot but I know you will still be watching out for me in heaven when I need you. You will always be in my heart so I won't say goodbye but so long for now.
